Why a European Law Institute?

"The European Law Institute, founded in 2011, is an entirely independent organisation which aims to improve the quality of law in Europe. It seeks to initiate, conduct and facilitate research, to make recommendations, and to provide practical guidance in the field of European legal development. In contrast to purely academic research, the conclusions of its projects are intended to have immediate practical application."

Sir Francis Jacobs, President of the European Law Institute

The law in Europe has a profound impact on the daily lives of European citizens, companies and organisations. As an independent organisation, the European Law Institute (ELI) aims to improve the quality of law, support its development and contribute to its proper implementation both on a national and European level.

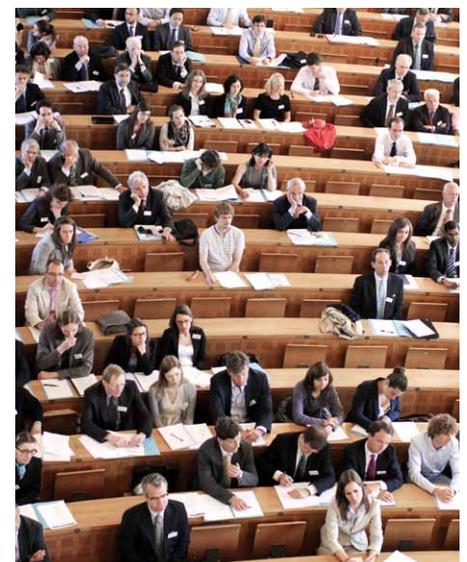

At the heart of the ELI's activities are its projects, which can be long-term endeavours or quick reactions to legislative developments.

The ELI is partly modelled on the American Law Institute (ALI) which was founded in 1923 and has since become a landmark institution in the US-American legal system. Like its American counterpart, the ELI aims to unite jurists of the highest standing from all branches and professions of the law. The Institute operates on its own initiative but is also open for cooperation with other institutions that share its vision, including the ALI.

Since its foundation, the Institute has established close working relations with several European institutions such as the European Parliament, the European Commission and the Council of Europe as well as international institutions such as UNCITRAL and UNIDROIT.

The European Law Institute is a democratic, membership based organisation established under Belgian law as an Association Internationale Sans But Lucratif (AISBL). Its current headquarters is located in Austria, where the Secretariat is hosted by the University of Vienna.

Membership

Join ELI

- › Fill in an application at www.europeanlawinstitute.eu/membership
- › Submit two references from amongst the current members
- › Applications are subject to Council's approval

The ELI is uniquely broad in its membership. Members come from academia, the judiciary, the various legal professions, governments, legislatures and other vocations. There are two categories of members:

- › Fellows who participate in the Institute's activities on the basis of their personal and professional convictions without regard to the interests of clients or stakeholders.
- › Observers who may be individual Observers or Institutional Observers actively involved in European legal development, but cannot undertake to act without regard to the interests of particular stakeholders.

The ELI relies on its Fellows to make crucial decisions at the annual General Assembly. Among other things, they can vote to approve the Institute's projects and participate both as voters and candidates in elections for the Council, the Institute's main governing body.

An original feature of the Institute is that members can become closely involved in all parts of its work. It is open to members to propose topics on which the Institute should work. They may be invited to take part in project teams or advisory committees, or they may join a Members Consultative Committee. Members are encouraged to participate in the annual General Assembly and project conferences, and have access to a unique network of prominent legal experts from all over Europe and beyond.

The ELI's social platform 'MyELI' facilitates communication between all members of the ELI community, offering them numerous possibilities to engage in networking and discussions online. Should you have any questions please contact the Secretariat at secretariat@europeanlawinstitute.eu.

Hubs

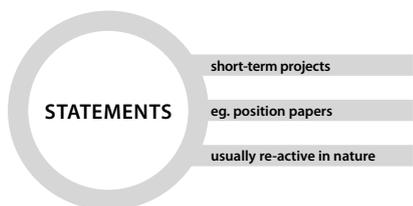

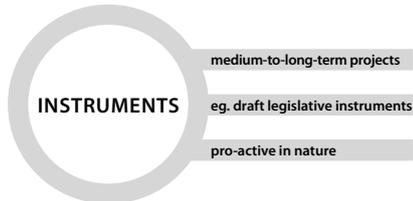

The ELI is in the process of setting up national hubs all over Europe, to serve as a vehicle for internal and external communications, recruiting new members and providing opportunities to network. Hubs in France (Paris) and the United Kingdom (London) have been launched successfully in late 2012 and early 2013 respectively.

ELI is committed to the principles of comprehensiveness and collaborative working, thus striving to bridge the oft-perceived gap between the different legal cultures, between public and private law, as well as between scholarship and practice. To further that commitment it seeks to involve a diverse range of personalities, reflecting the richness of the legal traditions, legal disciplines and vocational frameworks found throughout Europe."

ELI Manifesto

Projects

ELI Projects take the form of Instruments and Statements:

Any project carried out under the auspices of the ELI should:

- › serve the people, companies and organisations in Europe by improving the law or facilitating its application;
- › be principally capable of producing results which can be of immediate practical utility to legislative bodies, judiciaries, or other interested parties (eg. draft rules);
- › be the product of collaborative work conducted by jurists from a wide range of vocational backgrounds;
- › have a genuinely pan-European perspective which takes due account of Europe's various legal traditions.

The ELI published its first projects in 2012, the Statements on the Proposal for a Common European Sales Law (CESL) and Case Overload at the European Court of Human Rights, which are available on the ELI website. It has also embarked on a number of both long-term and short-term projects in the areas of, for instance, criminal law, administrative procedural law, copyright law and the law of non-profit organisations.

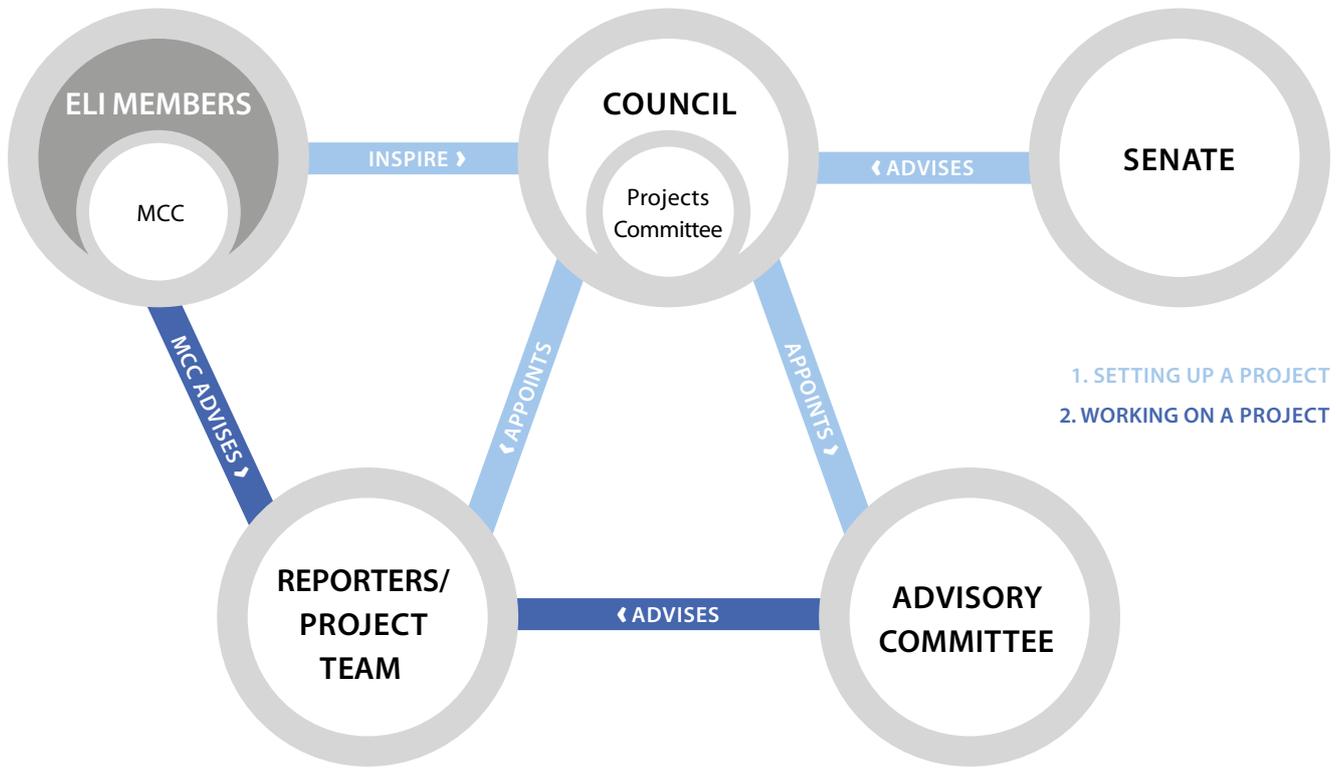

For further information on current and completed projects, please visit www.europeanlawinstitute.eu/projects.

"ELI should not get involved in politics. We took the view that political choices had been made and we would accept those. We would concentrate on getting the draft to be more user-friendly, to correct mistakes and make it more coherent. What I think we have achieved is to be appreciated as a body that can produce a much better text and can put forward suggestions that correct matters from a perspective that is pan-European."

Sir John Thomas, Chair of the ELI Working Party for the Statement on the Proposal for a Common European Sales Law

"As any builder of bridges can tell you, you need a reliable and sound surveyor to advise you where and how to build the foundations of the bridge on both sides of the river. You, the members of the European Law Institute, will provide practical advice to policymakers and authorities across Europe on how to build these bridges. Advice that will ultimately help to build the European area of law and justice for the benefit of our citizens."

Viviane Reding, Vice President of the European Commission and EU Commissioner for Justice, Fundamental Rights and Citizenship

- 1. SETTING UP A PROJECT
- 2. WORKING ON A PROJECT

Project Workflow

Any project ideas, submitted by a member or coming from outside the ELL, are reviewed by the Projects Committee and must be accepted by the Council. If a project is accepted, it will be conducted by a Project Team that will consult an Advisory Committee and in most cases a Members Consultative Committee (MCC). The role of the Advisory Committee and MCC is to provide comments at various stages of the project. The Advisory Committee consists of appointed experts whereas the MCC may be joined by any member of the Institute. Final results of a project are to be approved by the Council and the General Assembly. In the case of Statements (short-term projects), an accelerated procedure may be used which requires only Council's approval.

Members Consultative Committees play an essential part in the work of the ELL. Any ELL member is invited to join an MCC, irrespective of the member's status as a Fellow, Individual Observer or Institutional Observer. There is no limit to the number of members who can participate, and MCC members need not be experts in the relevant field. MCC members come from various legal professions and specialise in different areas of law. It is exactly this diversity which enriches the debating potential of the MCC and makes its contribution so valuable.

Governance of the Institute

The highest body of the Institute is the General Assembly which elects from among its Fellows the main governing body: the Council. The Council is made up of 60 elected individuals as well as ex-officio members representing selected institutions. Council elections for half of the seats take place every two years at the General Assembly. The Council in turn elects from among its members an Executive Committee, the Association's administrative body. Furthermore, there is a Senate in place to provide advice, which appoints from among its members an Arbitral Tribunal, tasked with settling any disputes within the Association.

The Council delegates many of its tasks and powers to its standing committees which deal with matters such as projects, membership and international relations. The Council meets at least twice a year.

European Law Institute

- › Pan-European, democratic, membership based organisation
- › Uniting prominent jurists of all legal professions
- › Aiming to improve the law in Europe
- › Carrying out projects with immediate practical application

Members of the ELI can contribute to its projects and gain access to an international network of jurists. Apart from various other activities, the ELI organises a three-day event every year that includes its ordinary General Assembly, a project conference and several social functions – bringing together some of Europe’s leading experts in the field of law.

“As we are dealing with new and emerging areas of EU law, the contributions of institutions such as the ELI can be very valuable in the analysis of the legal issues involved. In fact, the ELI is in a unique position to provide such a contribution, given its pan-European structure and the fact that it brings together all the pertinent disciplines and in particular academics, practitioners, judges and researchers.”

Vassilios Skouris, President of the Court of Justice of the European Union
